Rebuilding family heirlooms

Recycle and re-use is a mantra many of us live by as we do our bit to prolong the lives of household trinkets and knick-knacks, but even hefty pieces of furniture can be given a new lease of life thanks to the expertise of furniture specialists, Whitehead Designs.

The company prides itself on the expert craftsmanship of its upholstered wares, and has the know-how, creativity and sensitivity to rebuild entire pieces, restoring them to their former glory.

Whitehead's managing director, Rob Whitehead, explains: "Many of us have favourite pieces of well-used furniture that have started to look tired and need a bit of TLC, but it's hard to know how best to restore them. This can be particularly difficult when it comes to heirlooms that have served a family for generations, as it's difficult to trust that it will be properly returned to its former glory.

"But at Whitehead upholstery is our passion and rebuilding beautifully made pieces to give them a new lease of life is something we are proud to do completely by hand."

The company's on-site craftsmen don't just simply reupholster the furniture. If it needs it, using their expertise and experience, they will strip the piece back to its frame before building it back up again from the base. This means even badly damaged or formerly discarded pieces can be completely restored. The team will then tighten the frame, either completely replace or simply readjust the springs, and finally reshape, refill and upholster the cushions with hand cut fabric chosen by you.

Rob continues: "It's essential for us to make pieces that will last for years and have pride of place in someone's home, so we don't just paper over the cracks, we completely rebuild the furniture from the base up to not only guarantee its longevity, but to ensure every element is right for the customer."

In complete collaboration with you, Whitehead Design's craftsmen will restore your furniture by hand, before safely delivering it back to your door in the company's own van, ready to resume its place in your home.

All Whitehead pieces are made to order and take six weeks to produce from receipt of fabric.
